Description/Topic of clip	Start time	End time	Starting language or Quote	Ending language	Notes, if any
	0:26:36		"I don't think anything else is going to change our human condition, but our own actions. I like to think of it this way: there's just no better way to spend my heartbeats than in service."
	0:29:15		"I was learning, but the lesson was that by joining together in a common effort, you can actually change things as monolithic and powerful as a big corporation or anything."
	0:40:36		"No, the difference is - it was everybody. It was all about survival.....what kept us together was this whole question of who are we."
Being on the National LGBTQ2 Task Force board, late 1990s.	0:53:59				the first trans chair
	1:22:59	1:24:04	"I want to reframe it into: this is the opportunity for a new kind of struggle; for justice, for equity, for the understanding of identity. We are we are now awake. We are now aware, we are now strong enough to support those coming after us and to fight as hard as we possibly can... The objective is too great - it's nothing less than living a good life. This is what we must continue to fight for."
	1:30:13	1:30:22	"The various foundations of the right wing in this country have a great deal of money. Yes. Now, for the first time, we're seeing whole books written against trans folks."
	2:04:33	2:04:40	"Will they understand identity and consciousness in a new way that changes. Those that's what I'd be really curious about."
Legacy question	2:05:25	2:06:59			Basically, that human are the same as each other, despite their apparent or constructed differences.
